Important notes regarding internet radio bandwidth usage and broadband download limits

You should be aware that listening to internet radio stations, listen again programmes, podcasts and Pure sounds will contribute towards any download limit agreement you may have with your broadband provider. If you have concerns about your broadband limit you should be able to find out more about by checking the terms and conditions of your account, or by contacting your broadband provider directly.

Please note that listening to DAB or FM, or streaming your own music files using your own Media Server source, will not contribute towards any download limit on your broadband account.

An internet radio uses bandwidth and is considered as downloading.
